*From the St. James's Evening-Post, Nov. 23.
Hague, Nov. 29.*

We have Letters from Vienna that say, that the Emperor having conferr'd with Prince Eugene, touching the Treaty between the several Powers interested, was advised by him to accede thereto, as most conducive to the Interest of the House of Austria; and that accordingly, a Courier had been dispatched with some important Dispatches to Count Zinzendorf, his Majesty's first Plenipotentiary at the Court of France, who was to call in his Way at that of the Archduches Gouverness of the Austrian Netherlands, with several Letters, &c.

Leghorn, Nov. 7. Rear-Admiral Graave is ready to put to Sea with his Squadron to return to Holland. Several Captains assure, that above 20 Corsairs from Tripoli are out at Sea, and that the Tripolines have armed and sent a cruising several Vessels they took from the French. The French Court has refused to grant them Leave to send Plenipotentiaries to Paris, to negociate a Treaty of Peace, being fully resolved to take next Summer a signal Revenge for their Obsinacy and Breach of Faith. 'Tis said that M. de Gue Trouan will be appointed to command a 2d Bombardment of that Place.

Modena, Nov. 3. Some Days ago the Duke our Sovereign, on the Score of some Family Discontents, had Thoughts of Abdicating his Dominions, and resigning the Government thereof to the Prince his eldest Daughter, under the Direction of 4 Counsellors whom he intended to appoint: But the Hereditary Prince his Son having made most humble Remonstrances thereupon, his most Serene Highness has changed his Intentions.

Madrid, Nov. 9. The Duke de Bourbonville, who arrived here the third Instant, went immediately to the Palace, where he had the Honour to wait on the King and Queen, and to make a Report to their Majesties of the Situation of Affairs of the Congress; the Duke has since had frequent Conferences with the King's Ministers. The Court dispatched the 6th a Courier to Paris; but we cannot say that he is charg'd with his Majesty's final Answer, touching the new Propositions for facilitating the Conclusion of a Truce. 'Tis reported that his Majesty still expects some News from France to determine his Resolution; and that 'tis hoped the Galleons will in the mean time arrive at Cadiz. The Foreign Ministers at this Court have made new Instances to our Ministry, to procure a Lessening of the Induits on the Effects of the Galleons; but 'tis assured the Court seems not disposed to a Compliance, till the Expence of the Fleet, and the Damage sustained by retarding the Galleons be first known.

Cadiz, Nov. 25. The Galleons we are assured are expected here next Month.

London, Nov. 23. The Right Honourable Sir Robert Walpole, and the Noblemen and others now with him in Norfolk, are expected in Town by the middle of next Week at farthest.

The next Day the Prince sent his Gentleman of the Horse with two Coaches, drawn by 6 Horses each, to the House where the Aga lodged, who then went and paid the Counter-visit to his Highness: He found in the Presence-chamber all the above Officers and Gentlemen, and was there entertained with Coffee and a Pipe of Tobacco.

They are to be much wider than the former, and all Freight:

Paris, Nov. 24. We hear that the Saltee Men have lately joined themselves to those of Tripoli, to cruise upon our Ships, and have already taken three of them, according to our last Letters from Leghorn. This Affair 'tis thought, may hinder the good Reception of those Envys, who are now coming to ask Pardon of the King, for what has passed among that Nest of Pyrates.

He was immediately let Blood, and other Means were used in hopes to bring him to Life, but to no Purpose. There were found in his Pocket eight Sixpences, a piece of Chalk, and a News Paper.

The French and Dutch Mails make no mention of the King of Spain's final Answer to the proposed Truce being yet received; only the latter gives an Abstract of a Letter from Paris of the 26th instant, advising that his Catholick Majesty would soon send thither his said Answer, which they hoped, by the last Courier from Madrid, would prove favourable.

Those from Paris of the 3d instant bring nothing extraordinary.

According to Letters from Petersburg, the Officers of the Army have received new Orders from Moscow, to continue the Levies, and to spare no Money, for the enlisting of the ablest bodied Men.
